

TALK WITH CHIEF OURAY.

His Allegations Against the Indian Bureau.

Their Stipulated Annuities Unpaid and the Money Used by the Department—Indians Want to Handle Their Own Money—No Complaint Against the Miners—He Will Not Sell His Lands.

[illegible]

Quay was his grievances were, to which Quay replied that there were a number of them. In the first place they had not been paid their annuities under the Bruno treaty; that they had received only $24,000, while they were charged by the Interior Department some $63,000, the difference between $24,000 and $63,000 probably having been expended ostensibly for the benefit of the In-

Senator Teller explained to Murray that he had last summer endeavored to induce the Interior Department to pay them in silver dollars the amount which was due them, and that Secretary Schurz had objected to doing so on the ground that white men would get

O'Urury said he had never had any cause to complain of trespass on the part of the people of Colorado; that some miners did come in on Elk river and work claims, but the lands were sterile and perfectly useless for other pursuits, and they had no cause for Senator Teller asked Oray what his people would accept from the Government to relinquish their present reservation. The witty Indian replied that he was not here to make propositions to the Government or to say what he would or would not take, but to be informed what the wishes of the Government were and what they were willing to do for his people. He feared, however, that if the Government would agree to give them anything it would result as it did before in their being paid out of money that already belonged to them.

Senator Teller asked Oray if he would be willing to cede to the United States reservation to Which Ouray replied that the White River Utes would go there, but his immediate people would not consent to leave Colorado; that they preferred to stay in about the same latitude they now were and to take 169 acres of land apiece and try to make an honest living; under no circumstances could the Government beg or drive him or his people to the Indian Territory or out of their present latitude. Senator Teller did not allude to the delicate question of the surrender of the criminals.

but confined most of his talk to the points above given. It will be seen from this talk that Murray is perfectly capable of taking care of his own interests and those of his people, and that he rightfully looks with suspicion upon the authority that has treated with him so many times and has universally failed to keep its obligations.
